

ANN MOSKOW

Majoring in psychology and sociology at the University of Witwatersrand, Johannesburg, South Africa and with over 25 years experience, Ann has provided consulting services to the public, private and not-for-profit sectors. With this extensive background in consulting and hands-on management experience of operations and projects, Ann successfully guides managers and staff through periods of significant change.

Her experience and expertise has led Ann to specialize in strategic framework development, organizational change, organizational design, performance management, internal and external communications and change management.

For PricewaterhouseCoopers Consulting, Ann led their Strategic Change practice for British Columbia. In that capacity, she trained senior internal consultants from across Canada in Corporate and Organizational Strategic Change.

Ann has trained executives and senior managers internationally and across Canada in various aspects of management practices, policy development and communications. She has been a guest lecturer in these topics at the Universities of Ottawa and Victoria, and at Camosun College. Most recently, Ann was a guest lecturer for the School of Health Information Science at the University of Victoria where she delivered guest lectures on project management and managing change in a work environment.

Ann is also actively involved in her community sitting on the Board of Governors for Camosun College, and the Boards of Directors for Project Literacy Victoria and Clothes for Kids (a BC registered charity). She has also served several terms on the Boards of her Rotary Club and of their Foundation.
