

FRANCES G. THORSEN

Frances Thorsen has a broad base of experience, both practical and accredited in communications, graphics and education. Working in conjunction with other Results Performance Management team members, Frances delivers workshops in presentation skills for a variety of clients including government agencies, private organizations and Royal Roads University. She also specializes in workshops in video technique for the purposes of presentation and training.

Frances is also a sessional instructor within the Faculty of Education, University of Victoria in both language arts and computer technology. She is working closely with a research team focused on instructors' usage of technology in the University, based on the course she has taught at the Faculty.

Frances's background in applying design principles for PowerPoint presentations stems from her ownership of Brownstone Press, a desktop publishing company which developed and redesigned educational programs for private companies. Brownstone Press also acted as a colour bureau for other businesses. Between 1983 and 1996, Frances simultaneously owned and operated a private school and a private learning centre in Toronto.

With a Master of Arts in Language Arts, Frances is currently working on an Interdisciplinary PhD at the University of Victoria between the Faculties of Law and Education. Her work is in educational reform.
